The Premises:

We met at Valery's flat in a well-known block. It is in a very safe and up-market area.

The review below covers five meetings, leading up to the one on 18th February.

The Lady:

Valery is exceptionally tall, slender, fit and with a full, natural, bust.

The Story:

I first booked Valery, for two hours, through an agency, which described her in her profile as 5ft 9ins tall. I had asked the agency to check if Valery was happy to see much older clients and was informed that they had checked with Valery and they confirmed that she was.

So, when I first met Valery at her former Belgravia flat I thought "Wow, she is tall!" as her true height is 6ft 1in. Then I asked her if the agency had passed on my question about older clients and they had not.

So, from an unpromising beginning I opened the wine which I had taken and we began to talk. As we got to know each other I soon learned that Valery is a great conversationalist as well as very intelligent and we were well into our appointment when I asked her permission to kiss her. I saw her "amused Mona Lisa smile" as she said "Of course." Some really tender kissing led to Valery suggesting that it was high time that we moved to a comfortable position on her bed. That was when I experienced the Valery GFE that her growing band of admirers were saying such great things about in her reviews.

Naturally, I booked to see her again, although being aware that she was soon to retire. Valery was kind enough to delay a family commitment so that she could see me for two hours again. This confirmed my impression of Valery's sweet nature. I was so impressed with my previous GFE that I did not consider anything other than a repeat, which is what happened.

Having reconciled myself to not being able to book Valery again I had a last-minute opportunity to arrange an appointment a couple of days before she left London and Valery was again very accommodating in varying her schedule to be able to see me for two hours. This was quite a romantic farewell GFE and as we parted I really was wishing her all the best with her future life, expecting never to see Valery again.

Then, in January, she reappeared on the agency site with a new portfolio of pictures. I booked her for two hours immediately, so that I was her first client upon her return. Of course, there was much to catch up with but I discovered that her skills had not suffered in any way in the almost six months of her absence. However, I did learn that Valery intended to take more control of her booking process and was planning to list as an independent through the Cherry Girls site.

So it was that my next appointment with Valery was booked directly, as an independent escort. I found out that Valery prefers rosé wine to my previous choices and I also took the opportunity to reflect upon Valery's 2013 portfolio of pictures. It dawned upon me that I had been so enjoying my time with Valery that I had completely neglected what should have been blindingly obvious: that Valery has the most extraordinary pair of legs of any lady I have ever met. This had not escaped the notice of one of my other good lady friends, who used the "Wow" word to describe Valery's figure. {We were playing our "girls we both fancy" game at the time}. I therefore resolved at this meeting to remedy this oversight and to take the opportunity to enjoy Valery in her completeness, rather than my previous habit of merely enjoying feeling her wrapped all around me during our sessions on her bed. So, when we moved to her bed much sooner in our meeting than we usually had I asked Valery to lie face down so that I could properly appreciate her legs, back and derriere.

This was the point at which I was rather shocked to discover that sweet, gentle, Valerie has the underlying physique of a true athlete. Her lower back muscles, her bum and legs are so toned that the description of "magnificent" seems quite appropriate. It feels a bit like discovering that the girl who I thought I knew has the alter ego of Lara Croft. This begs the question of what impact this discovery will have upon our future encounters. At this point I can only be certain of one thing: that it is going to be enormously enjoyable finding out!

I suppose that I must thank the original agency for incorrectly listing Valery's height, otherwise this report would not have been written.
