The Lady:

She was Japanese, quite attractive and busty, but clearly not the girl shown as Yomiko on the website. Nor was she any of the other girls pictured.

The Story:

I saw this professional looking website, rang the number and booked a one hour nuru massage with Yomiko who has a gallery of pictures on the site. I was given an hotel address in Bournemouth which should have set alarm bells ringing because the website gives the impression you will be visiting a massage centre for a proper sensual massage with happy ending, candles music etc. When I got to the hotel I was told to come up to the room which turned out to be a tiny room with a single bed. The girl, though quite attractive and Japanese, was not the girl in the pics. I could not see any nuru gel and asked for confirmation that she was going to give me a nuru massage (body slide). It became apparent that she didn't have a clue what I was talking about and that I was in for a bog standard back street type of service. I should have left but like a mug I paid up and got a very amateurish massage, was then offered and took sex, which she wanted to get over with so she could get on with seeing the next client. All in all a waste of time and nothing like you would expect to get from looking at the website. It may be that there is a proper massage centre in London (also referred to on the site) but the Bournemouth service is a standard, dull, rub down (no nuru in sight) followed by uninspiring sex. All told 30 mins rather than the hour paid for. Total rubbish. Please avoid.
