The Story:

The signs were all there I just chose not to read them as my dick was doing the thinking. I booked via telephone and was asked to call when a few minutes away which I did and there was no answer. So I parked up and tried again 5 minutes later and again no answer. Kept trying every five minutes for next 20 minutes and finally phone was answered. I was asked I could attend 45 minutes later which was OK as lots of nearby shops to fill time so I agreed. So 40 minutes later phoned again to get address and guess what no answer. After a further 20 minutes she eventually answered and I got the address so headed there.

So I turn up and was asked what services I wanted and we agreed on that and she asked me for £100. She then disappeared for 10 minutes and came back with a nice cold drink of OJ and a request for a further £20. When I asked why she stated that she had made a mistake with the price and so I hander over another note. She then disappeared for a further 5 minutes or so and I could hear her talking to a male in the kitchen which made me feel a little uncomfortable.

She had already wasted over 15 minutes but eventually she guided me upstairs and asked me to undress whilst she did the same. We started to have a little kiss and then we moved over to bed. She was very dominant and kind of pinned me down and climbed on top of me and this is where it all went wrong. The door burst open and a large black gut stormed in accusing her of having an affair and threatening to beat the crap out of me if I didn't get out with 60 seconds. I'm absolutely certain he would have hit me so I got dressed double smart and ran.

With hindsight the guy was clearly the bloke she spoke to in the kitchen and its clearly a scam. I should have left when I was asked for additional money.
