The Premises:

My first time at Ego, which was easy to find, modern and clean and totally un-sleazy. Waited hardly 10 seconds from pressing the buzzer before being welcomed in by a friendly maid. I had confirmed my appointment (first of two for the day) earlier in the morning so she knew who I was, whom I was going to see, and took me straight up to a spacious, spotlessly clean and well-appointed room, explained the m.o. and offered me a drink.

The Lady:

Curvy but slim, very attractive, and really nice and friendly and chatty.

The Story:

Was a few minutes early so, having walked up from Bletchley station on a rather humid morning (about 25 minutes), took a quick shower. Tiffany arrived just after I had finished and introduced herself to me with a quick peck on the cheek. We confirmed the service and I was invited to arrange myself face down on the massage table - this by the way, was rock solid and didn't squeak and had a fresh paper covering.

The massage began with long, light strokes, and during that part of the session Tiffany relaxed me - I can't help getting nervous in the presence of beautiful, naked ladies - chatting and asking a few, unintrusive questions about myself, how I had found out about Ego, what I do, that sort of thing. Fairly soon the massage became more intense and more methodical, but with the strokes getting ever more sensual: Every bit of me was covered with the focus returning more and more frequently and skilfully to the parts that matter. The body-to-body felt great. I was asked to turn over and things worked their way in the same fashion to the inevitable conclusion, with Tiffany, with a cheeky grin, taking good care to keep me on the edge - and I mean really on the edge - right up to the appropriate time.

Another shower to clean off the oil, handed over the payment, accompanied back down to the front door, another quick kiss and I was on my way, blinking in the sunshine.
