The Premises:

Ego Massage is a well-known establishment in Bletchley, an outlying area of Milton Keynes. It's discreet and conveniently located right next to a non-paying car park just off Aylesbury Street in Fenny Stratford. It's clean and professional, well-organised and generally a good, relaxing environment.

The Lady:

Wow! Jayda is a classic Baltic beauty - tall, blonde, well-proportioned and feminine. Absolutely luscious in every respect. Mmmm!

The Story:

I'd booked for an hour with Jayda because the Ego website gives her qualifications in massage and as I'm also a qualified masseur, I could tell that she actually knows her stuff, rather than being a girl who's done a quick one-day course and thinks she's got it all. Also, of course, her photos show her as being drop-dead gorgeous! I wasn't disappointed in either her looks or her massage!

Jayda spent a good few minutes working on my back, my shoulders and my legs: I was drifting into deep relaxation as she worked away the tension from a busy week at work. After the hand work, she climbed up on the couch and slid her beautiful body up against me, pressing and kneading and making me purr with pleasure as I felt her oiled breasts sliding the length of my spine.

After a few minutes of this, she suggested I should turn over. The rest of the session was increasingly focussed on more intimate interactions between us, never going beyond close personal massage but nonetheless being a wonderful, stimulating, sensual experience for me and, I hope, for her too.

There was time to lie and relax before jumping into the en-suite shower and getting dressed, ready for a shopping trip to Ikea just around the corner.

I would love to go back to Ego again, to catch up with Jayda!
