The Story:

Although I have recommended Jordan I had a bit of a mixed experience. Some of this was because she was worried I was talking too loudly owing to an inadequately thin wall. I had originally paid £60 for a 1/2 hour tantric massage. I had this service with other girls at the same location and it culminated with a topless hand relief. Upon entering the room, Jordan asked me if I wanted a shower. I said yes, but she asked before or after the massage? I opted for before and duly showered. I came back into the room after maybe 5 minutes at the most and went to lie down on my stomach on the massage table. Jordan then told me to lie on my back because there wasn't enough time. I asked if I could see her breasts because she was still wearing a tee shirt and bra. She didn't seem to understand and motioned for me to feel them over her clothes. I asked a second time and she said something about a tip. After travelling through London I agreed to pay and she duly removed her bra to reveal her shapely, firm breasts with large pink areolas. She then gave me a nice, slow hand relief to completion while I caressed her breasts.

I decided not to shower afterwards and went to get dressed. I handed over £20 and she said something along the lines of she was only joking! Hilarious!, but I let her keep it all the same. She kept repeating that a 1 hour appointment would be better and suggested I come again. Sorry, I don't usually make second appointments anyway. When I got outside I looked at my watch and in all I'd been in there just over 20 minutes. So, summing up I would recommend that anyone going book an hour appointment and leave the shower until after the massage.
