The Story:

Have you ever thought you had died and gone to "Heaven"? No! Then you have not experienced "Death by Blondes".

I indulged myself at Anya's Manchester apartment where the two friends were waiting to greet me and, on seeing them together, I discovered my sporran was not heavy enough to stop me from showing my feelings.

The ladies create a nice atmosphere together and there was a very smooth transition from introductions in the lounge to disrobing in the bedroom and lying down together in the 999 position, with me in the middle of the sandwich.....I didn't know which way to turn first.

No decision was necessary, I was invited to relax and with the ease with which silk moves, I was soon draped in Blonde Loveliness.

If you are looking for more detail, I will disappoint you and suggest you indulge yourself and discover what will be your secrets. However I will tell you that at one stage my lips were dry and Caprice used a very unique method to pass me some refreshment. She may show you if you ask nicely.

I would offer only one criticism--I should have booked the ladies for longer!

Galahad's relatively new indicator advising how many ladies the writer has reported on is probably to give a measure of the writer's experience, but it really only indicates the number of ladies who were inspirational enough to encourage pen to paper and says nothing about the ladies who don't.
