Reasonably tall, rather plain looks but busty and (I'm pretty sure) genuinely Japanese.

The Story:

When last heard from on this board, I was extolling my long run of good luck in finding bliss and contentment with London's oriental maidens. But all good things come to an end in time and, in this case, rather abruptly.

I arrived on time Rikali's flat to find her in a non-descript halter and shorts that neither flattered her ample bust nor accentuated her oriental features. Her stereo was blaring out pop music at a dangerous level as I walked in and she seemed rather surprised when I walked over and turned it down so that we could converse. Then she suggested that I take a shower, handed me a towel and waved in the general direction of the bathroom. I told her that I had just had one but that I would be happy to share a second one with her. She said she also had just showered and didn't seem to think an encore with me was such a great idea, so I went off and tended to myself, anyway - what the hell?. Next, while I was in the shower, the building's roach exterminator showed up, knocking rather loudly on the door. Not Rikali's fault, of course, but she was rather quick to invite him in to do his Tom DeLay imitation rather than suggest that he might come back later. Fortunately, I had bolted the bathroom door or I would have had unwanted company, looking pretty ridiculous as I struggled to make the small towel she had provided to me cover my potbelly and protruding parts. He left, I had a brief chat with Rikali in which I told her I thought she should consider becoming a full-time student and then go home to a life and career that did not require finely-honed interpersonal skills. I repeated a shortened version of this conversation with the receptionist at Babylon Girls, who seemed confounded by this news. I then dressed, collected my ?150 and departed. I left the bouquet of roses and bottle of wine that I had brought for Rikali as modest recompense for her wasted ten minutes.

Rikali didn't have a clue what being an escort entails! I know that Babylon Girls is affiliated with this board in some way and I know that many of their escorts have received good FRs here. And it is my own fault that I selected Rikali without having any recommendations on this board (or any other) to support my choice. But surely Babylon Girls has some responsibility, both to the escort and to the client, to ensure that their girls receive some elementary instruction or training in the arts of pleasing the client. Rikali is a student and, having done so myself many years ago, she is to be commended for seeking part-time work to help support herself. However, she picked, and was picked for, the wrong line of work.
