The Story:

Feeling stifled by the recent heat in London I decided to spread my wings a little and take a trip to the countryside to take the country air. Not having met Penny before I thought it might be nice to first have dinner and a glass of wine so we could get to know each other a little and Penny managed to skillfully choose a restaurant where they serve my favourite beer on tap (Spitfire - outstanding!). Penny looked stunning when I met her and is every bit as attractive as her site portrays. Penny's charm and convivial manner meant that we were soon engrossed in deep meaningful conversation which belied the fact that we had only just met. Penny is a fascinating lady who clearly enjoys meeting people and leaving the restaurant to go to her home was almost an afterthought. Penny lives in a very nicely furnished flat which was transformed into a cosy love nest with scented candles and music. Penny very subtly changed the mood of our evening whilst on her sofa and is clearly a 'black belt' in the art of seduction. I was soon under her spell and what followed was both passionate and totally absorbing. There is no need to go into detail but I was taken into a world of exquisite pleasure and delight. It might be a slow train trip back to London but I just sat and looked at my smiling reflection the whole way back. I will definately be back to the countryside soon - there's certainly something in the country air!
