The Premises:

Flat about 2 minutes' walk from Holborn station. The waiting area was messy but not dirty.

The Lady:

Amazingly hot! Just like the website pictures (but a touch darker) she was tall and slim. Has a girl-next-door type of innocent face.

The Story:

I'd been waiting for a chance to go to the Palace on a Thursday to see her. When I entered I saw Neelam who was also working there but had already arranged to see Katrina. No drink was offered by the maid or by Katrina. It's a small touch, but one that is appreciated!

Went into the room and paid for 20 minutes with sex and massage. Katrina came back in and stripped off giving me a quick massage. She brought my chap to attention and we proceeded to some mish and then her on top. Unfortunately for me, my chap was not performing and Katrina tried to save me with a HJ but to no avail. Had a good and funny chat with her - a really nice girl to be with.

On leaving and closing the door behind me, I heard a lot of laughing going on. Whether or not this was about me or things in general I don't know, but ladies it's not good customer service and I guess the more shy punter could slit his wrists over it!

Service Provider's Rebuttal

The establishment writes:

Having spoken to both ladies, we can confirm that they were not laughing at you. The receptionist and Katrina have bubbly personalities and laugh at things on the tv or sometimes for no apparent reason just to keep themselves happy. We all know each other quite well at Indian palace. We can definately say that no one would deliberately hurt someone's feelings by laughing loudly when the person had just walked out of the door. So please don't think that way about us.

We would also like to say thank you for visiting us. We did speak to the receptionist who insists she always offers fresh orange juice or water.

The only time any receptionist would not offer is if we happen to run out.
