The Premises:

House converted into flats in a pleasant, quiet residential street about 3 minutes walk from Kingston train station. The room was of a very high standard with an ensuite bathroom and a huge mirror.

The Lady:

She has a perfect size 8 figure, beautiful long hair and flawless skin. Half Italian, half Romanian and speaks with a sexy Italian accent. I'd say she's about 5'7" rather than the 5'9" she claims to be, but that's not a complaint. She's got a warm and friendly personality, albeit a bit introverted.

The Story:

I first met Adriana when she worked for a few weeks in an establishment in west London and became a regular client. On my last visit there she told me she was leaving and setting up in Kingston-upon-Thames and gave me her contact details. I then arranged to see her in Kingston. She told me the fee would be the same as I had been paying before, which was fine by me.

On my way to the appointment she gave me the street address. On arrival I realised she hadn't told me which bell to press, so I tried the top one, waited for a full minute, then tried the middle one and waited for another full minute. As I started to ring her number, she opened the door. I'm used to the door being opened within a few seconds and didn't appreciate being kept waiting for so long. Not wanting to introduce any negative vibe into the meeting I made a mental note to mention this at the end of our session, but in the end I forgot. When we got to her room I gave her a wad of eighteen £10 notes and asked her to check it. She said "It's OK, I don't need to check it, I trust you!" which I thought was a nice touch. As usual, I had an hour of really great sex with her. Afterwards she offered a two-girl experience for £360 on a future visit and introduced the other girl to me. I quite fancied the idea.

I spend about £5k a year on this activity and am happy to spend all of that on one girl for a couple of years until the urge for some variety takes over. In return I expect to be treated fairly.

I was away for a while after this visit and on my return I noticed her page (using a nickname) on another website which linked to a very favourable review. I then realised that she'd charged me, a regular client, 50% more than a first-timer. I'm happy to pay the going rate and never haggle over price but I hate the feeling that I've been ripped off. I queried her fee structure by email but didn't get a reply.

She's been touring in Eastbourne and Cheltenham and now seems to be based in Cheltenham. For all she knows I'm often in Cheltenham, so why not stay in touch and keep me as a regular client? In this report I've referred to her as Adriana of Kingston because that's where I saw her but I don't know if she's going back there.

She's now offering 15-minute quickies. She once told me that she prefers older guys because young guys just tend to ram her. Maybe she said that because I'm an older guy or maybe she meant it. Anyway, I'd guess that quickies (which I would think result in her being on the receiving end of a hell of a lot of ramming) are a sign that she's getting a bit desperate for business which is a great shame because she could be a really top-notch WG and deserves better than that.

I'm left wondering why she apparently hasn't been able to establish herself in the London area – the recession / more girls / fewer punters making it tough maybe? Or maybe she just can't get her act together. I had some great times with her and would have been a regular client for a couple of years or so but I couldn't recommend or see again an unreliable girl who leaves me feeling ripped off. I suppose that given she advertises on the other site I shouldn't be too surprised that it ended badly.
