The Story:

Yes I'm back after an absence of a year. As before I aim to provide succinct and informative reviews of the various fakers and occasional gems that make our hobby such an interesting one.

It seems a shame to begin with a faker but such is life. "Ella" is advertised as a good looking Indian girl in her early 20s. In fact she is at least 10 years older and the photos are either fake or were taken before the turn of the millennium. I also see that various pretty looking Indian girls by the name of Sobia and Saleema are advertised on another agency (Prime) as working out of the same address. I suspect they are all the same person. The woman herself is British born with a marked London accent and I'm not entirely convinced that she has much Indian ancestry though she is sallow looking. Performance decent and she's pleasant enough but would be overpriced at half the price.
