The Story:

Well it didn't happen. I rang her at around 12.30pm and asked if she was available. While discussing times, I suggested 3pm and she replied "perfect!" We agreed to meet for one hour and she charges £90 per hour. She texted me the postcode to her place and I thanked her for it in the expectation that I would ring nearer the time to confirm the exact location.

When I got to Whitechapel, there was a torrential downpour. I texted her to ask for a more exact address and she gave me the block where she was. When I got there, there were two flat numbers where according to her text, she could be. I rang her to ask which one and it went to voicemail. I rang a few times more and waited some twenty minutes after the appointed time. Still the calls went to voicemail.

So I gave up. Had she rung back to ask where I was and hadn't answered because she was in difficulties, I would have been fine with that. But now, as I type nearly four hours after the meeting was due to happen, there has been nothing.

Avoid and take her reviews on the other site with a large dose of salt!
