The Story:

Chose Amy very carefully in preparation for a 2 night trip to Nottingham, feeling that if night 1 was successful maybe she might be free on night 2 as well. Booked by phone a week before for last Friday for 10.30 pm (possibly a bit earlier but if she couldn't manage that then 1030 was the fall back time) and discussed the type of role-play. We communicated during the week to confirm and I phoned while driving down as agreed. When I arrived at my hotel she told me to ring when I had settled in as she took 30 minutes to reach me. I phoned at 10pm to be told that she was just starting a 'quickie' session with another client. Some quickie, as by 11.30 she still hadn't left her house so I texted that we should call it off. She texted back that she was thinking the same and asked if I was available the next day instead. No apology. Very disappointing after such careful and apparently successful preparation. I have no wish to rubbish Amy but she should not have started another session in preference to a long-standing booking. I have checked my texts for the accuracy of this report.
