The Premises:

Apartment block close to the Great Ancoats Retail Park in Manchester. On street parking nearby. Appeared to be a fairly tidy/safe area. I can't comment on the inside of the apartment as I didn't get that far.

The Lady:

Petite reasonably pretty asian girl. The photos on her website are genuine but perhaps overly flattering.

The Story:

An extremely surprising and disappointing experience to be honest. Even after two hours I'm not sure what I did wrong. She has very positive feedback on Adultwork but I wonder if this has been manipulated by excluding any possible negative meetings.

Based on her photos, profile, and location I thought I'd treat myself. An initial text to her was met with a blunt response directing me to her AW website. Fair enough, I thought, she probably has dozens of timewasters texting her every day. So I made the booking through the AW website and didn't hear anything. I then texted her to confirm she'd received the booking and she replied yes she had and everything was fine. I sent her an email asking if she could dress in a certain way and she asked me to show her what kind of outfits I wanted, which I did.

On the night before the booking I received a text asking me if I could come a couple of hours earlier, which i agreed to. Then on the drive down i received a text saying she wouldnt be wearing a sari as "she didn't do dress-up, she'd just be wearing jeans". Again, not a problem. When i got to the address and parked up I let her know I was outside. She said she'd be 5 minutes late and then i heard nothing more. I walked up to the building and went into the secure car park by mistake. Realising my error I phoned her to let her know where I was and, for some reason, this upset her really badly. She came down after about 20 minutes (!) and was clearly in an extremely bad strop asking why I hadn't waited outside. At this point i was also quite fed up. Given the amount of messing about that had been involved and how she obviously wasn't happy I suggested we cancel the booking.

We parted and about 10 minutes later i received an aggressive text calling me a timewaster and how she was going to block my calls and emails. Throughout the whole process i'd tried to be as flexible and as diplomatic as I could. All i did was walk into the wrong entrance !!!!!

Normally i don't post reviews on here but this has been such a surprising and confusing experience that I just wanted to share with everybody.
