The Premises:

Her flat was in the M5 area near the Campanile hotel.

The flat was shared with another women (who stayed in her room whilst I was there). The session took place in the lounge/kitchen. The flat itself was clean. One odd thing that stood out was that the oven was on (with the door open) for the duration of session; I guess maybe the heating was broken?

The Lady:

The lady was not the one shown in the adultwork profile. She was young and good looking (probably early to mid 20s), tall, with a sizeable bust. She told me she was Hungarian.

The Story:

Comms were good (all by text) and I had no trouble making a booking. I made a booking for one hour and then got a taxi to her place.

Upon opening the door, I realised that the girl I was seeing was not the one listed in the profile. I should have backed out at that point, but she was still hot so I went ahead anyway.

Then things went downhill. Firstly, she was sharing a flat with another women, which was slightly offputting (she stayed in a separate room though). Secondly, it quickly became apparent that the girl I was with spoke very poor English (she didn't know what a lap-dance was despite listing it as one of her likes). Thirdly, and most importantly - the services she gave were not as advertised - OWO was not on offer and her service was disinterested.

After cumming twice in half an hour, she informed me that despite booking for an hour I wasn't allowed to cum again (the AW profile says you can cum as many times as you want). So, having made a decision not to waste any more of my time, I left.

After getting home I did a bit more research on this girl and it seems the profile is known to be a bait and switch. So don't be like me and do your homework first.
