Details of Service Provider:

The Premises:

Clean, modern three-floored terrace in a new development on the edge of Reading. Easy, safe parking.

The Lady:

Her profile depicts a slightly curvy English lady in her mid-20s with lots of tattoos (one full sleeve, the other forearm & wrist, chest, throat, thigh).

The woman in the profile may be the same person but:

She is Eastern European (from previous bad experiences, I'd estimate Romanian).

She is considerably older and more overweight than shown in the pictures.

Pictured as clean shaven/waxed all over, from the hips down she is extremely, roughly stubbly. 10 days' growth, minimum. It was like running my hands over sandpaper.

The booking was very late morning, just before noon. She had agreed the time an hour beforehand, but had not bothered to shower. Her skin was greasily unwashed.

Most strikingly, she has none of the tattoos shown on the AW profile. There's a single, 3 inch inking on her lower back but none of the extensive, biker chick stuff from her pictures. She says the pictures were taken of her wearing temporary tattoos. !!??

The Story:

WORST PUNT EVER

It wasn't simply that she couldn't be bothered to provide a decent service: more than that, it was as though she actively wanted to make this as dreadful an experience as possible.

After reasonable communications, I was directed to the house where she works. The door was held open for me, with her hidden behind it. As I came in, the door was closed and she said the room was upstairs. At this point I believed (and hoped) I was talking to the maid. If only.

Reaching the top floor bedroom, she asked whether I wanted an hour or 30 minutes (remember this detail - it's significant). I asked if she was the lady from the profile and she acted surprised: I didn't bother raising her age and weight but did point out the lack of tattoos. She replied that her profile pics showed her wearing temporary ones, and when I asked whether she thought people might book her based on how she looks online and could be surprised, she grudgingly said she possibly should change the pics.

I probably should have braced myself for an unpleasant scene and insisted on leaving at this point, but couldn't be bothered with the hassle of the inevitable argument. Although I had planned to spend an hour with the slightly curvy and epically tattooed kinkstress shown in the profile, I said 30 minutes would be fine. She took the money and left the room for a couple of minutes.

Now that she had my cash, her demeanour changed massively for the worse. She returned to the room and let out a huge, long-sufferingly pissed-off sigh. Concerned, I asked if she was OK, expecting to be told of some bereavement, major domestic disagreement or similar. It turned out this was as enthusiastic as she was going to get.

After all of five minutes (and I remind you here that she'd offered a whole hour, and charged full whack for 30 minutes), she suggested how and where I should cum and asked if I was nearly finished. I pointed out that we'd barely started and she said with all the seductive charm of an aggrieved shop steward that she needed to hurry me, we needed to be done in 15 minutes as she had to collect her daughter. I just laughed. I reminded her about the offer of an hour, that she'd charged for 30 mins, that there had been no mention of any problem with timing, and asked what she'd have done if I'd paid for twice as long like she'd suggested only a few moments earlier.

Stopping all physical contact, she stepped away and sullenly began messaging on her phone muttering that she'd see what she could do whilst berating me for being difficult. This wasted further time, making her even more pushy about finishing quickly and getting me out of there.

By this stage I not only didn't find this woman attractive, I actively disliked her. I tugged myself off as quickly as possible (could have done the same at home with better visual stimuli and saved 70 quid) and left without a word.

Taking all aspects of personal preference & taste out of consideration, this woman provided the most deliberately and calculatedly poor service I have received in decades of visiting WGs. It's as if client dissatisfaction is her specific goal. The only rational explanation I can think of is that she'd planned to stiff me for twice as much money for an hour's service and still get rid of me after 15 mins, so maybe felt cheated out of the difference.

She's been on AW only since summer this year, so (with the removal of feedback on there due to COVID) there aren't any warnings about how awfully she rips people off. I hope this review helps others avoid the same mistake I made.
