The Story:

I hadn't been to a party for a while and I was thinking about returning to Sacred Rose when I saw the advert for this - called the Limelight Club. It advertised 6 single girls plus 3 couples (and possibly up to 12 females in total) and 10-20 males. It was the couples that made me decide to try it as I remember a Sacred Rose party where a couple turned up and I was invited by a guy to fuck his wife, which I found quite a turn on.

I arrived, paid, had a drink and was shown where to get undressed. The party seemed very well planned and I was made to feel welcome by the organisers. So far so good.

There were two girls in action downstairs and two upstairs and I was told that there were 2 more on their way. There were also two couples - fully dressed - who were sitting watching a porn movie on TV. One couple left about 15 minutes after I arrived and the other didn't seem interested in getting involved. So at this stage there were around 15 guys and 4 girls plus a number of fully dressed guys standing around chatting.

I had a brief encounter with one of the girls - but I decided that this type of high ratio party wasn't for me. Unlike Sacred Rose, Natashas, Lady M's - there was no chat amongst the participants. If anything it was a bit predatory and there were clearly a number of regulars. The girls were ok but weren't particularly welcoming to us new people (probably because they were too busy..).

One more girl arrived around 9.30 but so did about 6 guys so the ratios were getting higher and I found myself standing around and moving from room to room in the hope of finding someone who wasn't being attended to by at least 3 guys already. Some of the guys seemed to be enjoying themselves but they clearly knew what they wanted and how to get it. I've always hated queues and

I guess I'm not the type to force my way in. So I decided to leave as I didn't see things improving. A couple of other guys had left even earlier than I did. It was a good move as my field report on Emma will show.

So all in all an impersonal experience for me and in future I'll stick to parties which guarantee and deliver a low ratio.
