The Story:

To be honest, I was disappointed with Erin. She was chatty and friendly - but she just didn't seem in the mood for sex. I'm not claiming I'm God's gift to women, but I've been with quite a few escorts (including many from Max's) and most of them seem pretty enthusiastic, or are pretty good at pretending.

Erin was different - she didn't initiate anything, didn't really kiss (although the receptionist said she did), didn't do CIM (although the receptionist said she did), I had to ask her to go down on me, and when we did eventually get around to sex, she discretely placed her hands and legs in a position that I couldn't really go too deep.

We had a good chat while we weren't having sex - but let's be honest, I wasn't there for the conversation. If I wanted to be with someone who only had sex reluctantly, I could have stayed at home!

Erin's a nice girl, and perhaps she was just having an off day - she seemed pretty tired, yawned a lot and said she'd been working all day yesterday. But after 45 minutes or so, I also lost the enthusiasm to continue, got dressed and left feeling a bit short changed.
