The Premises:

Very central flat first floor flat off a busy street in Covent Garden. Parking very difficult during the week but easy to reach by public transport.

The Lady:

Very dark skinned indian women in her early-mid 20s, black hair, medium height and build. Ok face.

The Story:

Photographs on the web site show Asha as a very slim, petite, fair skinned Indian girl with sexy highlighted light brown hair. The "Asha" I met bore no resemblance whatever to that girl. As per above, she is dark skinned (south-Indian?), medium build with black hair. I think it extremely unlikely that the web-site photographs are genuine. Thus she gets an automatic "No" recommendation.

When will these agencies learn that fake photos do nothing for their business?!
